On 29 March, [REDACTED] Inc., outlined for OTR an offer of contract assistance in planning and presentation of high-level briefings. His company has successfully completed 80 - 100 presentations for a number of Federal agencies and most of these have included every aspect of briefing -- planning, preparation of script, visual aids and support during the delivery. [REDACTED] was recommended to OTR by [REDACTED], ORD, who felt this company might be of some help in OTR's training courses. SIWA representatives who attended the briefing felt that this company could be kept in mind for possible use by top-echelon Agency officials who might need tutorial assistance in preparing in-depth briefings.

We have sent [REDACTED] in the Office of the Legislative Counsel, a copy of [REDACTED] 1964 ICAF book on National Intelligence, and his 1967 OTR-published book, Intelligence for National Policy. This was in response to a request from a senator for unclassified information on USIB and the Intelligence Community, which [REDACTED] transmitted to DD/TR. In transmitting these books we cautioned [REDACTED] about the classification and dissemination restrictions placed on the 1967 book, and appended a copy of [REDACTED] memo to D/TR which gave the background on these restrictions and recommended their removal. Partly as a result of this request, DD/TR has 25X1A9a instructed [REDACTED] to see ADD/S personally about the [REDACTED] text to try to have it declassified after removal of the final section.

Many sessions were on topics of interest; sessions on contemporary China and Southeast Asia were overflowing. Sessions on the tradition of radicalism among Japanese youth and on the role of women in South and Southeast Asia today were also of considerable interest. [REDACTED] spotted a couple of prospects for use in our programs. [REDACTED] found a number of good scholars but few who made a very dynamic presentation.
